

More Horry County Museum Presentations

Smith Family Newsletter

Yes, I know the June Newsletter is coming our late! Believe it or not, I actually thought I had done it, then Bob asked where it was? I guess I just 'got lost in time' !! Anyway, here we are. I am going to write a little about our attendance at the Horry County Museum. This month they seemed to focus on some of the history of the Native Americans living in South Carolina way back between 1715 and 1728.

On June 12th we attended a Native American flute concert given by Snow Wolf, who is a Native American Flute musician, of Shoshone and Mohawk descent. He also told stories of the Kokopelli (traveling flute Player). Needless to say it was very enjoyable.

Then on Saturday, June 26th, we attended a presentation on the Yamasee War. The presenter was JR Fennell, who is the Director of Lexington County Museum in Lexington, SC. The focus of the presentation was on the relationship between the native Americans and the colonists in the 17th and early 18th centuries. It was a very interesting and informative presentation.

The rest of the pictures speak for themselves. More wildlife on the lake. See how big the 'young' have grown. The one on the right is between our home & our neighbors. Minnie in the picture below, is watching for the ducks or geese. That is her TV.
